MR. TUNG'S REVENGE

Some years ago, before the Communists came to power, a christian farmer in Manchuria was attacked in his home by bandits in the middle of the night. They bound him, set fire to his house, and robbed him of everything. In spite however of his losses and his sufferings, Mr. Tung bore it all in a truly christian way.

About a year after this he was going along a street in the town when he met a sick man hobbling painfully along. He thought he knew the man's face, and then remembered he was one of the leaders of the band of robbers which had treated him so badly the year before. Just at the same moment the robber recognised him, and quickly covered his face with his sleeve hoping to escape recognition.

"Don't do that," called Mr. Tung, "I am not your enemy."

Hearing this the robber fell on his knees and begged for his life. "What has brought you to this pass?" asked Mr. Tung. "I have told you that I am not your enemy. Tell me about yourself."

The bandit told him that the government troops had driven them out into the wilds of Manchuria. "It was bitterly cold," he said, "and my feet were frozen. Now

I have no cares, O blessed Lord,
For all my cares are Thine!
I live in triumph too, for Thou
Hast made Thy triumphs mine.
And when it seems no chance nor change
From grief can set me free,
Hope finds its strength in helplessness,
And patient waits on Thee.

Lead on, lead on triumphantly!
O blessed Lord, lead on!
Faith's pilgrim sons behind Thee seek
The road that Thou hast gone.
He always wins who sides with God,
To him no chance is lost;
God's will is sweetest to him when
It triumphs at his cost.
